2014 ANNUAL REPORT

Hanna Perkins Center for Child Development

HPC

Dear Friends,

What a year it was for The Hanna Perkins Center for Child Development. Your contributions of energy, ability and financial support were invaluable to our organization as Hanna Perkins underwent a wonderfully transformational year.

The Hanna Perkins Board of Directors approved the organization's new strategic plan in January 2014. The plan includes a new mission and vision statements, core values, balanced scorecard and goals, strategies and metrics all of which align with the newly revised mission of the organization.

In January 2014 the American Psychoanalytic Association approved a collaborative child psychoanalytic training program between Hanna Perkins Center and The Cleveland Psychoanalytic Center. Both organizations worked tirelessly on program curriculum, governance and administration. The program's first training class began in September 2014.

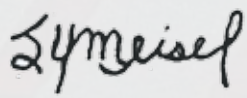
The Spotlight on Our Stars benefit in April 2014 raised over $290,000+. The event honored Debby and Zack Paris with the Hadden Award.

After overcoming several years of financial challenge, Hanna Perkins ended its fiscal year in June 2014 with a balanced budget.

While we are pleased to share this Annual Report with you and review the highlights of this past year, we optimistically look to the coming year and the many opportunities we will have to serve the emotional well-being of children and their families.

Thank you for your commitment to The Hanna Perkins Center for Child Development. You made a difference here this year. With your ongoing support we will continue to change the lives of the children and families we serve.

With gratitude,



Susan Y. Meisel

Recipients of the 2014 Hadden Award

Debby and Zack Paris, long-time friends and passionate supporters of the Hanna Perkins Center for Child Development, share a love of helping others. Zack, who recently retired from Jones Day after more than 30 years as a partner with the firm, is now an adjunct faculty member at John Carroll University, where he is teaching an upper-level political science course on the founding and development of the American Constitutional System. Zack first joined the Hanna Perkins Board in 1991 and served as board president from 2000-2004. His vision and countless hours of determination led the organization through its transition to its current Malvern Road location. Debby is a Hanna Perkins-trained child analyst and clinic associate with her own practice as a psychoanalyst. She also has served as a member of the Hanna Perkins training faculty. They are proud parents of Jeremy (Katie) and Norman (Jackie) and grandparents of 2 ½ year-old Anika and newborn Lincoln.

The Hadden Award honors the passionate commitment of Lainie and Dr. John Hadden, whose inspired dedication to Hanna Perkins has enhanced the mission of our Center in countless ways.

In Memoriam

Eleanor Weisberger Weintraub

Originally Appeared in The Plain Dealer; July 22, 2014

Eleanor Weisberger Weintraub and daughter Susie Ratner

Eleanor Weisberger Weintraub, a longtime friend, colleague and member of the first Hanna Perkins Center training class, passed away on July 21, 2014 at the age of 94. Weintraub worked for years in the division of child psychiatry at University Hospitals and served as an assistant professor at Case Western Reserve University, where she taught medical students and residents.

Along with several scholarly articles, Weintraub wrote books about the needs of children and giving advice to parents. According to her family, Weintraub also taught an undergraduate course with Dr. Benjamin Spock, who wrote the introduction to her first book. She was a regular guest on local television and radio, including the Mike Douglas show and the Morning Exchange with Fred Griffith.

She also appeared several times in The Plain Dealer discussing issues such as how parents can help children deal with upsetting news and the effects of being on their own.

Her book Letters from Nin is a novel about a young mother that doubles as a guide to young parents. Your Young Child and You: How to manage growing up problems in the years from one to five.

"The story is the mother's development," she told The Plain Dealer in 2001. "It offers support for mothers who do it 'the right way,' which she defines as spending a minimum of two years as a full-time mother. "We're living longer. What's five years to give to a couple kids?"

A native of Cleveland, Weintraub attended the former Fenn College, graduated from Ohio State University and received her master's degree in social work at Western Reserve University's School of Applied Social Sciences. She was trained in child psychoanalysis in the first class of trainees at The Hanna Perkins Center for Child Development in Shaker Heights.

Mrs. Weintraub was first married to Dr. Austin Weisberger, chairman of the Department of Medicine at CWRU until his death in 1970. Her second marriage to Dr. David Weintraub, a neonatologist and long time family friend, lasted 31 years. She is survived by three daughters, Susan Ratner (James), Betsy Seifert (Julian), and Debby Paris (Zack); two step-children, Jane Weintraub and Peter Enav; eight grandsons and seven great-grandchildren.

Mission

Early childhood experiences shape a person's entire life. To foster the emotional well-being of children and their families and to help them master life's challenges, The Hanna Perkins Center for Child Development promotes positive early learning experiences through educational and therapeutic services for children and parents; training and support for professionals; and community-wide collaborations.

Vision

A world where every child is listened to, understood and helped.

Programs and Services

Hanna Perkins School offers parent-toddler, pre-school and kindergarten programs. What makes the school special is our focus on helping children understand and manage their everyday feelings. Parents appreciate how the school helps them to understand and deal with their children's behavior. Some parents choose Hanna Perkins simply because they want their child to get the best possible start in life. Others may choose Hanna Perkins because their child is shy, has melt-downs, difficulty separating, or other such common concerns that may get in the way of learning. Their experience at Hanna Perkins School not only prepares children to go on to elementary school with solid pre-reading, writing and math skills, but also teaches children to know and express their feelings in age-appropriate ways. Our classrooms feature a high ratio of specially-trained teachers to children, as well as coaching and support for families.

The Hadden Clinic focuses on in-depth treatment for children ages 3 through adolescence. Its work offers transformative psychotherapy, psychoanalysis and guidance for children, adolescents and parents. This contrasts with treatments that rely solely on medications which, as a policy, we do not prescribe. Parents of children receiving help at Hanna Perkins are part of the team, thinking together with a therapist, and applying the understanding that has been gained at home and in other social environments.

Community Engagement includes Hanna Perkins' therapists and teachers conducting workshops, symposia and consultations for early childhood educators, child care providers, counselors, psychologists, social workers, child life specialists, and other professionals working with young children and their families. These programs address the developmental needs of children and assist participants in understanding what children are communicating through their behaviors and how they--as professionals--can use this understanding in helping children grow.

The Child Psychoanalytic Training Program is a unique program of local and distance learning for future child psychoanalysts. Clinic trainees are post-graduate students pursuing advanced study in child and adolescent emotional development.
